HAZEN FUNERAL TUESDAY
MURPHY NOW CITY'S HEAD

PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

Sworn In as Mayor To Fill Vacancy Caused by Hazen Death

PRETTYMAN GOES UP

Becomes Head of Council; Murphy To Issue Statement Wednesday

Emery M. Murphy, assistant superintendent of the Marion Steam Shovel Co., was sworn in as mayor of Marion this morning by City Solicitor George Geran.

Murphy succeeds Mayor Earl Hazen, who died Saturday afternoon at his home on Oak st. Murphy falls heir to the chief executive's chair by authority of law which provides for the president of the council to fill an unexpired term.

R. E. Prettyman, who has been serving as president pro tem of council, is automatically elevated to the position of council president and, should Murphy find his other duties too pressing to serve as mayor, he will be advanced to that position.

Plans Not Announced

Murphy issued no statement today. He said that he had several plans in mind but wished to defer announcement until some time Wednesday.

These changes necessitate the selection of another councilman to fill the vacancy. Members of council have 30 days to make their selection and if it is not accomplished in that length of time the mayor is given the power to name the new member. The next regular meeting of council is called for Jan. 7 and it is expected that the appointment will be made at that time.

Reorganization Necessary

Inasmuch as president of council is not allowed to serve on any committee, Prettyman's advancement will call for a reorganization of several of the various groups. He was serving as chairman of the airport committee and as a member of finance, ordinance and franchise, printing and supplies and building committees. This reorganization will be made at the next meeting of council.

Murphy has served the city as councilman and president of council for 10 years and is well versed in the transaction of the city's business.

CHURCH RITES ARRANGED FOR CITY'S CHIEF

Trinity Baptist To Be Scene of Tribute to Late Mayor

DIED SATURDAY

Cerebral Attack Comes as Fatal Culmination of Long Illness

Funeral services for Mayor Earl M. Hazen, 50, who died Saturday afternoon at his home, 637 North Oak st., will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the Trinity Baptist church in charge of the Rev. L. A. Woods, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, and Rev. H. F. Weckmueller, pastor of First Reformed church. Burial will be made in Marion cemetery.

Mayor Hazen had been in ill health for a year, having been forced to remain away from his office frequently. Friday morning he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and never regained consciousness.

Served Three Years

He had served three years as chief executive of the city and would have started on the last year of his second term Tuesday morning. Mr. Hazen, who was a former city clerk, won the election in 1923 in a close contest. He was reelected in 1927 by a comfortable majority.

During his term of office a number of civic improvements have been made, among them being the installation of the municipal court, the widening and paving of West Center st., purchase of a municipal airport and the replacing of the street cars by buses.

Mayor Hazen was born 50 years ago in Geagua county. He attended the county schools and Chardon High school, later entering Hiram college, where he won considerable fame by his athletic prowess.

For several years, after leaving college, he was engaged as an engineer at Paducah, Ky.

Mr. Hazen came to Marion in 1901 and became associated with Peter Turner in the laundry business. In 1904 he was employed by the Marion Steam Shovel Co., being placed in charge of the erection room.

This position he filled until 1923, when he was appointed city clerk by Mayor M. L. Buckley. He served as city clerk until he took his seat as chief executive.

Mr. Hazen was a member of the Trinity Baptist church and was affiliated with Marion lodge No. 70, F. and A. M., Kadgar Grotto, Elks, I. O. O. F., Jr. O. U. A. M. and Rebekah lodges.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Rachel Kathryn Hazen, he leaves two sons, Milford Earl and Dexter, both of this city, and one sister, Mrs. Helen M. Turner, of Pulaske, Tenn.

Offices at the city building closed at noon today and will remain closed until Wednesday morning as a mark of respect to the late executive.

MARION READY WITH GREETING FOR NEW YEAR

Watch Parties, Midnight Shows, Included in Welcoming Program

PARTIAL HOLIDAY

Public Offices, Most of Stores, To Close; No Mail Deliveries

Tonight Marion will bid farewell to the aged 1928 and an instant later welcome, with ringing of bells and blowing of whistles, the infant 1929.

To many New Year's eve will simply be the end of another day. But to others it will be the occasion for merrymaking.

Restaurants are planning to take care of the merrymakers during all hours of the night. Two theaters have planned special midnight shows. Radio and bridge will keep many up to see the old year out and the new year in.

Weather Balmier

The weather tonight promises to be more favorable for nocturnal ramblings than New Year's eve a year ago. Those who found their automobile radiators frozen when they broke up their parties last year will be more favored tonight unless there is a sudden change in temperature. A year ago tonight the mercury in local thermometers hovered around the zero mark.

Most of the Protestant churches of the city held special New Year services last night. St. Mary's Catholic church will hold special services for the New Year at 5, 7, 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, it was announced today by the Rev. Father William J. Spickerman, pastor. Benediction will be pronounced at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night.

Watch Party Tonight

A number of the Protestant churches are also planning parties and services for tonight. The City Young People's Union will hold a watch party at the Central Christian church. A number of Sunday School classes are also planning watch parties.

The cast for "Elijah the Uncompromising," the five-act play to be presented at the watch party of the

NEW YEAR DAY CHILLY IN 1928

Three below zero, traffic blocked, drifted snow and everything that goes to make up a blood-thrilling New Year. That was the introduction of 1928.

There are no statistics from the weather bureau to indicate that this year will compare in any way with last year during the wee sma' hours between Dec. 31 and Jan. 1.

Probably light rain turning to snow tonight and Tuesday; colder Tuesday." This forecast has been issued today.

Sunday morning, Jan. 1, last year, brought out the snow plows, found radiators frozen and havoc raised in general.

Coolidge Isolated From World On Yacht In South

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga., Dec. 31—President Coolidge went some 50 miles south of here this morning supposedly hunting wild turkey on the private 60,000 acre game preserve of Howard E. Coffin, the auto magnate who has been acting as host to the executive and Mrs. Coolidge for the past five days in these semi-tropical waters.

The president left St. Simons Island Sunday afternoon aboard the Coffin yacht with the announced intention of spending the night at the Camden preserve, on which he would embark on a turkey hunt this morning slightly before dawn. At his request, relayed through the secret service, the newspaper men did not accompany him. The latter were assured a telephone at the lodge would provide them with the same facility for information they have had ever since Mr. Coolidge arrived at Sapelo Islands, where the Coffin estate is located.

Dubious, but respecting the request, the reporters remained behind. In the evening when they attempted to establish telephonic communication they found to their amazement there was no phone.

Further check showed no telegraph lines within 10 miles, and the nearest was closed for the night. Inquiry about making the trip by motor disclosed the fact that the last 12 miles were over a forest trail upon which all re-

RURAL POLICE FOR STATE IS PLAN OF DYER

Bill To Be Submitted at Jan. 7 Session of Ohio Legislature

COLUMBUS, Dec. 31—Creation of a state rural police system is proposed in a bill, prepared by C. A. Dyer, Columbus, legislative agent of the Ohio State Grange and the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, it was announced today. Dyer plans to have a member of the Ohio legislature introduce the proposed measure at the coming session which opens here Jan. 7.

The bill is endorsed by members of the Ohio Bankers' association, the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs, the Ohio Federation of Child Conservation League Circles, the Ohio W. C. T. U., the Ohio Society of the Daughters of American Colonists, and the Ohio State Safety council, it was stated.

Not Made Public

Details of the bill have not been made public. Its principal provisions, however, according to Dyer, require that appointees as state rural policemen shall pass special examination equivalent to that for an Ohio National Guard officer; that the number of appointees shall not be less than 100 nor more than 200; that enlistments shall be for two years; that appointees shall pass a mental and physical examination; that members of the force shall comply with provisions of law for control and regulation of the state highway; that the men shall be trained in their duties; that these policemen shall be commissioned by the governor and authorized to make arrests without warrant on all violations of traffic laws of Ohio which they witness, and that they may, also, have full police powers which may be exercised at any time when on duty; that money arising from fines and forfeited bonds resulting from prosecutions under this act shall be paid one-half into the state treasury to the credit of the state maintenance and repair fund, and one-half "to the township," municipality, or county where the prosecution is held.

GOOD INTENTIONS

Jack Dempsey Declares That He Is Through with Ring

CHICAGO, Dec. 31—"I have no intention of fighting again," Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, declared here today. He passed through Chicago enroute to Lansing, Mich.

Dempsey said he came from California on a business trip and hoped to finish it with a game of golf with Tex Rickard in Florida. The former champion said reports he intended to reenter the ring were "pipe-dreams."

NEW YORK IS READY FOR WETTEST "EVE"

Gotham Prepares for Hilarious Celebration Despite Whalen's Drive

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Despite Police Commissioner Whalen's continued drive against speakeasies, New York was prepared today to stage an hilarious celebration tonight to welcome the birth of the babe yclept 1929. Indications are that the merry-making will be the wettest and most riotous in years.

Whalen has not indicated that a special drive will be made on New Year's eve parties at night clubs, and the general feeling was that police activity would be concentrated against the less respectable dives and dens.

"No reservations left for New Year's eve parties" was the word today from all hotels in the area extending from "Hell's Kitchen" to the East Side, and from the downtown business section to the uptown residential district. The cover charges range from $5 to $15, with the sky the limit for the night clubs. All theaters, hotels and night clubs are expected to hang up the S. R. O. sign.

PROTOCOL ACCEPTED BY BOLIVIA TODAY

Committee To Continue Efforts for Settlement of Dispute

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Bolivia today accepted the terms of the conciliation protocol submitted by the Maurtua committee of the Pan-American conference.

Immediately on receipt of a cable from his government, Bolivian Minister Diez De Medina called on Secretary of State Kellogg and handed him the formal acceptance. The Paraguayan acceptance reached here Saturday. Despite the illness of Dr. Victor Maurtua of Peru, at Garfield hospital suffering from pneumonia, it was expected by Secretary Kellogg that a meeting of the coalition committee would be called shortly to continue negotiations for settlement of the Bolivian-Paraguayan boundary dispute.

CITY OUTLINES IMPROVEMENTS FOR NEXT YEAR

Paving of 10 Streets Included in Program Compiled by Engineer

TO EXCEED 1928 MARK

Expected To Be Nearly Three Times Amount of This Year's Work

One of the most pretentious civic improvement campaigns in several years is planned by Marion during 1929, according to a report compiled by City Engineer Tom S. Cathers.

The program calls for the paving and resurfacing of 10 city streets and the construction of one sidewalk and one sanitary and storm water sewer. As estimates for all the work have not been figured yet it is impossible to state the exact cost of the work, although it is expected to be nearly three times as much as was expended in 1928.

List in Detail

Following are the 10 streets expected to be paved. Legislation has been passed or approval of petitions has been made on all except two:

East Center st., Main to Greenwood st.; Main st., Big Four tracks to Columbia st.; North Prospect st. resurfacing, Mark st. to Erie tracks; West Center st., Oak st. to Main st.; Chicago av., Center st. to Wilson av., and from Wilson av., to north terminus; Lake st., Prospect st., to east terminus; Pennsylvania av., Center st. to Church st. and Homer st., Center st., to Church st.

The one sidewalk will be constructed on the west side of Nye st. from Brown av., south to first alley. The sewers will be constructed in Elm Heights.

$124,000 Program in 1928

Improvements costing approximately $124,000 were completed by the city during 1928, the report reveals. These improvements included such work as paving and widening streets, construction of sewers and sidewalks.

Three streets were paved during the years representing a total cost of approximately $102,000. Four sewers were constructed at a total cost of $10,000 and six stretches of sidewalk were completed which caused the expenditure of $3,050.

This excludes work made on repairing other streets throughout the city.

WOMAN RELEASED FROM COUNTY JAIL

Sentence of Mrs. Monroe Suspended Pending Remaining Trials

Mrs. Clara Monroe, who has been held in county jail under sentence of one year in the Marysville reformatory for women for contributing to the delinquency of Edna Hickman, 16, was released Saturday when her sentence was suspended pending disposition of the cases of Walter Henry and Robert Willis, also charged with contributing to the Hickman girl's delinquency.

Mrs. Monroe was released on the order of Judge McNeal, of juvenile court, who sentenced her when she pleaded guilty in his court. Henry and Willis have been at liberty under $200 bond. They pleaded not guilty when arraigned in Judge McNeal's court. Later they demanded a jury trial.

According to the story told by the Hickman girl she was coerced into marrying Henry, 40 years her senior, after she had been taken to Zanesville. Affidavits for the arrest of Mrs. Monroe, Henry and Willis, were filed in juvenile court by Mrs. Archie Hickman, mother of the girls.

Mrs. Monroe has filed answer in common pleas court asking for dismissal of a divorce petition filed by her husband, Ronald R. Monroe. In her answer she claims that her husband has failed to provide, as he promised, for her two children by a former marriage. Mrs. Monroe is represented by Attorney Louis E. Myers.

LICENSE FOR AUTO DRIVERS IS PLANNED

Measure To Be Introduced at Next Session of Ohio Legislature

COLUMBUS, Dec. 31—A bill which will provide for issuance of state licenses to auto drivers will be introduced during the coming session of the Ohio legislature. Members of the joint legislative committee on economy in public service today announced that they will cooperate with the Ohio State Safety council in urging enactment of such a statute.

This proposed law will decree that all persons now driving automobiles be licensed, but that each license shall be subject to revocation in the event that the person holding a license is convicted of disobeying highway laws.

The bill stipulates that a $1 fee must be accompany each application for a license which will be good for one year. At the end of each year applications must be made for new licenses. Renewals are to be issued unless the commissioner of motor vehicles is properly informed that the applicant violated traffic acts. Persons whose licenses have been revoked or suspended must take an examination before a new license can be issued. A medical examination, also, may be required. Persons who are denied licenses may appeal to the common pleas court for an order requiring issuance of a license.

The revenue made up of the license fees is to be used for the administration and enforcement of this proposed law, including payment of compensation to inspectors in the proposed state department of public safety.

All judges of courts of record would be required, upon conviction of any person for violating any law or ordinance relative to careless driving, driving while intoxicated, or failing to stop after an accident, to place a notation of this conviction on the guilty persons' license cards, and to notify the state commissioner of motor vehicles.

ATTORNEYS LOSE IN FIRST LEGAL FIGHT

Judge Rules Against Woman Facing Life Sentence in Michigan Pen

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 31—Attorneys for Mrs. Etta Miller, mother and grandmother who faces life imprisonment for a fourth liquor law violation, today lost the first skirmish in the incipient legal battle to save her from an automatic life sentence when Judge Charles B. Collingwood refused to consider either a motion for a new trial or a motion to quash the proceedings against her.

When State Senator Seymour H. Person, Mrs. Miller's defense first lieutenant, argued a motion to quash the fourth offense proceedings, mostly on the grounds that intent was a recognized factor in any crime, and that Mrs. Miller could not possibly have intended to violate the habitual offender section of the criminal code, Judge Collingwood said.

"I have looked into that—your motion is denied."

Person immediately served notice that he would appeal to the state supreme court both on the matter of a new trial in the fourth liquor law conviction, and in the case of the refusal to quash the life term proceedings.

3,400 DOGS MINUS LICENSES FOR 1929

Only 1,070 Tags Issued for Marion County Canines, Auditor Reports

Indications were today that there would be more than 3,400 untagged dogs in Marion county after tonight, according to a report from the office of County Auditor Earl E. Thomas. At noon today the auditor's office had issued 1,070 tags for 1929. More than 4,400 tags were issued for 1928.

Tags for 1928 will be worthless after midnight tonight, the auditor stated today. Tags may be purchased, however, until Jan. 20, without the addition of the $1 penalty, which will be applied after that date.

Dog owners who have not purchased 1929 tags for their dogs will be subject to arrest after midnight under the present dog law, Auditor Thomas stated today. Whether owners of untagged dogs will be arrested will depend largely upon action to be taken by County Dog Warden Dale Rhoades.

Rhoades, whose term expires with the close of 1928, has been reappointed by the board of county commissioners for next year.

HUGE DEFICIT NATIONAL TREASURY

Congress Must Exercise Utmost Economy, Anthony Says in Report

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 — The nation's treasury faces a deficit of from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year ending June 30, Rep. Anthony, Republican of Kansas, chairman of the house appropriations committee, said today.

A deficit may be avoided, he stated, only by the exercise of the utmost economy by congress and by unusually heavy tax receipts as a result of general industrial prosperity.

Anthony said his estimate was based upon information from the treasury, the appropriations thus far made and those in prospect.

The possible deficit, he said, might be increased to $80,000,000 if the government loses the $15,000,000 back mail pay case now in the supreme court. In this case the railroads were given increased pay for carrying the mail by an interstate commerce commission order.

The surplus of $36,000,000 on June 30, as estimated by President Coolidge in his budget message was overcome by an additional $75,000,000 found necessary for tax refunds.

Congress thus far is well under the budget in appropriations and Anthony is hopeful this condition will continue.

If congress had followed the recommendation of Democratic leaders of either the senate or house or had adopted the U. S. Chamber of Commerce proposal of a $400,000,000 tax reduction last year, the treasury might have a $200,000,000 deficit, Anthony said.

BULLET WOUND IS FATAL TO VICTIM OF HOLDUP

TOLEDO, Dec. 31—Joseph Misiewicz, of Toledo, is dead here today, the victim of a robber's bullet following a holdup early yesterday morning.

Misiewicz was shot in the stomach after he had been relieved of $8 from his pockets by four armed men, according to his story to police. He died in Lucas county hospital late last night.

1,000 AUTOISTS FACE JOB OF HOOFING IT

Estimate That Many Will End Year Here Without New Licenses

Probably 1,000 Marion motorists will become pedestrians at midnight tonight as a result of failure to obtain automobile licenses. Automobile headquarters was rushed to capacity today issuing licenses to those who put off until the last minute the buying of plates.

At the auto club office, where the license distribution is in progress, 1,256 sets of plates were sold Saturday and about 800 up to noon today.

Motorists who have not obtained the 1929 license plates for their cars were warned by police officials today, not to drive without the new licenses after midnight tonight.

All persons caught in such an offense will be arrested and arraigned in municipal court. This is not a ruling of local police but orders issued from the state.

This stand was taken, it was explained, because motorists have been given ample time this year to procure their new plates, inasmuch as licenses have been on sale for more than a month.

FIGHTS FOR LIFE

Only Slim Hope Held for Recovery of Infant

COLUMBUS, Dec. 31—While only a slim hope is held for his recovery, Donald Hettick, 19-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hettick, of Corning is fighting desperately today for his life in Grant hospital here where he was brought yesterday for the removal of a peanut from his lung.

The baby is also suffering from pneumonia and influenza. The operation for the removal of the peanut which will be performed sometime today, is said by hospital physicians to be the only hope of saving the child.

The peanut has been lodged in the child's lung since Nov. 28.

KING HAS RESTFUL DAY, REPORT SAYS

Physicians Hold Conference After Ruler Passes Restless Night

LONDON, Dec. 31— Official announcement was made at Buckingham palace at 3 o'clock this afternoon that King George was "having a restful day."

This announcement followed a noon medical bulletin that the king had passed a somewhat restless night.

The fact that the names of five physicians were signed to the early bulletin revealed that another consultation had been held at the palace during the morning. This accounted for the lateness of the bulletin, which is usually issued about 11 o'clock.

"Continued improvement in the local condition (infection of the right lung) is permitting the doctors to concentrate their efforts to recapture his majesty's lost strength. The noon bulletin, however, indicates that these attempts so far have been unavailing.

New Yorker Says Science Will Find Way to Extend Length of Human Life

Five Thousand Men and Women Hear Dr. Eugene L Fish Give Address at Convention of Scientists; Says Cycle of Living Organisms Not Fixed

NEW YORK Dec 31—Prediction that science can find a way to further extend the span of human life was made today by Dr Eugene Lyman Fisk medical director of the Life Extension Institute of New York City in an address at the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science which is being attended by 5000 learned men and women from all parts of the United States

Dr Fisk declared it was wrong for man to figure that his years are numbered to the Biblical three score and ten and that he should spend his life figuring out how to enjoy himself rather than devising ways and means to live to a ripe old age

The human life cycle has been greatly extended within the last 100 years by the application of scientific principles he pointed out but there is room for even greater achievement Living to the age of 100 years and longer for many people is not inconceivable he indicated in his highly technical, albeit interesting paper

Specific Means

"I am willing to admit" he asserted "that only a comparatively limited extension of human life—say 10 or 15 years—can be attained by simple adjustment of personal hygiene and the correction of physical defects found on periodic health examinations It may well be that any great extension of human life beyond 100 years must be attained by some specific means especially by control of the endocrine glands Nothing can hold back human effort in that direction

Dr Fisk does not believe that the life cycle of living organisms is fixed He said there is a subconscious conviction that it is more or less futile to attempt to interfere with the course of nature or the plans of the Divinity depending on the religious and philosophical view of the individual

Disputes Views

How it has decreed somewhere somehow by somebody that the tissues of the human body or any other living organism shall become lifeless within a certain length of time" Dr Fisk asked his audience, composed mostly of medical scientists "With those who hold such a view purely as a matter of religious conviction I have no quarrel but as a scientific proposition it is untenable

Disputing the view of some medical men that life cycles are fixed, Dr Fisk declared

"If a turtle lives 150 years a horse 7 years and a human being runs 100 years it is no final answer to say that these varied life cycles are fixed by nature

He pointed out that it has been claimed that a shortened existance is the price that man pays for his highly differentiated organism Yet he declared other highly differentiated organisms have and much longer life cycles Witness the turtle, the elephant and the dinosaur

KING APPEALS FOR NEW PEACE MOVE

Utah Senator Would Postpone Action on "Big Navy" Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec 31—An appeal to President Coolidge and President-elect Hoover to summon the nations of the world here for a new disarmament conference along with a postponement of action on the administration's "big navy" bill for one year, was made today by Senator William H King Democrat, of Utah

King called the administration's attention to the activities of the preparatory commission of the League of Nations which is negotiating for a new disarmament conference and to the pending ratification of the Kellogg multilateral anti war treaty With these peace moves under way King declared the United States should postpone all increasing armament moves until the government can determine whether further world disarmament is possible

I appeal to President Coolidge and to President-elect Hoover to withhold action on the cruiser bill until next December, said King In the meantime they can initiate a move for a new disarmament conference either independent of or in cooperation with the preparatory commission of the League of Nations

"If these efforts for disarmament fail and there is a disposition on the part of other nations to strengthen their armaments then I would not oppose a cruiser bill

LOCAL MAN INVENTS NEW MOTOR DEVICE

E. H. Cowan Applies for Patent on Auto Piston Bearing

Marion may become the birthplace of a valuable asset to the automotive world if an invention of E H Cowan, 632 North State st, fulfils the desires expressed of it

The invention perfected by Mr Cowan a machinist employed by the Huber Manufacturing Co is a compensating bearing for pistons which eliminates the need to ever change rings in the pistons of automobiles Several times such experiments have been tried but have never met with success

The bearing, has sent to the United States patent office a few weeks ago and Mr Cowan received his first papers Saturday along with a letter from the department stating that his invention was the most complete and near perfect ever seen at that office

Use of the new bearing which could be manufactured by automobile makers at a slight additional cost would make any adjustment possible without taking the head off the piston or removing the piston from the engine

When final papers on the invention arrive Mr Cowan plans to lease the bearing on royalty or sell it outright The invention has been demonstrated to several automotive engineers and has met with their approval

"A Woman of Affairs," with John Gilbert, Greta Garbo, Lewis Stone Dorothy Sebastian, Hobart Bosworth John Mack Brown and Douglas Fairbanks Jr Through Wednesday at the Palace

A COUPLE of years ago the young English novelist, Michael Arlen wrote a novel, The Green Hat" One might call the fiction days in which it circulated "The Green Hat' cycle for it was the smart thing to have the Arlen novel among the three or four volumes between the book stands on the library table

As in the case with all successful novels the picture moguls have seen to do it on the screen But, Will Hays looked the book over and decided that no such tale could adorn his cinema kingdom It was out he said

Whereupon after a few months and a period in the ethos The Green Hat emerges on the screen as "A Woman of Affairs" Not having read The Green Hat it is impossible for us to say what changes were made as Leslie Mason wrote the continuity and Clarence Brown did the direct ing of "A Woman of Affairs" Probably such changes were made as transpired after 'Rain' was forbidden by Mr Hays and then done into 'Sadie Thompson' by Gloria Swanson

"A WOMAN OF AFFAIRS' is an entertaining picture—for grown up audiences Not in a long long while has a picture boasted of as strong a group of players—or one so adequately cast.

There's Gilbert the lover Garbo the woman, Bosworth the lovers stern father, Stone the friend and physician and Sebastian the wife Young Fairbanks has a role of considerably youthful blustering that doesn't exercise one and Brown hasn't much to do as the wronged husband

THE story tells of Diana (Garbo) a young English girl of a rich and reckless family in enslaved in love with a boyhood lover Neville (Gilbert) Forceably separated by his father Diana marries the steady David (Brown) On their wedding night David leaps to his death in an attempt to avoid imprisonment for embezzlement To cover his theft Diana declares he died for decency thereby throwing a shadow over her own character Years follow with Diana in affairs with others

Three days before Neville's marriage to Constance, he finds Diana An illicit meeting follows Neville's marriage serenity is suddenly interrupted nine months later by Diana's illness Her recovery leads to their renewed love As they plan to break away from family ties Diana's cherished secret of what she had done for her husband is revealed

A handy deck of cards turns up a handy ace of spades and the handy death of the movies takes out Diana and sends Neville back to Constance

• • •

DEATH always turns things out right in the movies but here is a picture exceptionally well directed with strong situations and finely acted

As a team Gilbert and Garbo are up to the standards they have set in past pictures Garbo is now beautiful now homely now wistful and she can take any old rag of a dress and wear it becomingly

Realty Board President Reviews City's Progress in 1928

MARION'S FORWARD STEPS SUMMARIZED

Excellent Record of 1928 To Be Surpassed in 1929, Lewis Believes

PREDICTIONS FULFILLED

Past Year One of Marked Advancement, Realtors' Head Shows in Review

That 1928 more than fulfilled expectations and predictions from the standpoint of community progress and development in Marion and that 1929 will be a still better year is a summary of views expressed by R. T. Lewis in his closing address as retiring president of the Marion Real Estate board.

The address, delivered at the annual meeting of the board held at Hotel Harding last Friday, reviews the various steps in advancement shown in the city's record of 1928.

"I believe during this year more than any year heretofore, that public sentiment has been aroused to the great needs of our city," Mr. Lewis declared.

"The approval of the $750,000 school bond issue for the 1929 building program was the major event of the year. Increase in school attendance is probably the best evidence of our city's growth.

"The widening, repaving and relighting of West Center st. and the extension of the boulevard through from Mt. Vernon av to Delaware av., has taken Marion out of the village class and set down with other Ohio cities up to 60,000 and more in population.

Forecast Proves True

Here Mr. Lewis recalls that at the opening meeting of the Real Estate board in January, 1928, it was predicted that 1928 would be a banner year and that 500 more men would be employed in local factories by April 1 over Novembr, 1927.

This forecast was more than fulfilled, Mr. Lewis said. Although men were added to the payrolls in nearly all factories, practically 500 were added in one factory alone since that date.

"We promised to work for the building of a bigger and better Marion by coordinating the efforts of all Marion organizations interested in the growth, welfare, prosperity and beautification of our city," Mr. Lewis stated. Fulfillment of this program, he showed, came in organization of the Marion Civic association at a meeting of representatives of practically all local community groups in The Star auditorium.

"Practically every civic organization had a part in the preliminary work, so the Real Estate board wishes to claim little credit, except that possibly it planted the seed," the former board president said. "This organization will help us to solve our big civic problems."

Beautification Program

Community beautification, through cooperation with the Marion Garden club, was also cited by Mr. Lewis as one of the projects included in the Real Estate board's program for 1928.

As evidence of fulfillment of this policy, and in summarizing various important community developments during the year, Mr. Lewis said:

"Personally, I feel that Marion has improved more in general appearance this past year than any previous year or for that matter, any group of years in its past history.

"Just think what the year 1928 has given to Marion to help make it a bigger and better city, and more business like looking city in which to live:

"First, the greatest improvement over the very dark and rough past was the widening, repaving and the outstanding relighting of West Center st. and with this big improvement came a new half-million dollar theater, a new C., D. & M. Interurban station, a new three-story block for Montgomery Ward & Co., and the new Curtiss and Fairbanks blocks. All of these on West Center st. Then on East Center we can claim two new buildings, the Dugan block and that of Cussins & Fearn. The two remodeling jobs of the Fahey Bank and Kleinmaier Bros. made a big improvement.

Theater Valuable Asset

"The acquisition of the new one-half million dollar Palace theater completed this fall alone was an epoch making event in the growth of Marion and an outstanding achievement of the year. Its white lights alone, together with that of the new Hotel Harding sign have done much to give Marion the Fifth av. atmosphere which she acquired with the installation of the street's new lighting system.

"The new Christian Science church is a classic.

"Marion's new airport, fathered by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, was purchased during the year, which marks Marion as an up-to-date city.

"The new boulevard when finally completed through from Delaware av. to Prospect st., and we hope eventually through to Bellefontaine av., will give Marion that sense of spaciousness that we have never known before. The Harding Memorial of course brought about the paving to Delaware av. and the Vernon Heights Co. filled in the gap of nearly a quarter of a mile.

"The completion of the memorial and its beautiful landscaping we believe will have an effect for all time on Marion's future beautification.

Roadways Improved

"The Altrusa club, with the Real Estate board cooperating, planted flowering vines every 100 feet on both sides of the Delaware pk. for a mile south of the memorial. If this is effective other pikes will be planted later.

"The Marion Garden club with the Real Estate board cooperating planted 1,500 Iris and phlox around McKinley lake. There is still room for great improvement here and in the wooded section, and although I don't like to see trees cut down, I believe, however, that McKinley park could be made much more beautiful by cutting or selling every other tree in the heavily wooded section, for then a little sunlight could come in and grass could be grown.

"The new stop and go signals in uptown Marion are the last word in signals and give protection to pedestrians and autoists alike.

"In our survey of the railroad right-of-way, the most outstanding spot lacking in beauty was a junk yard and the owner and railroad officials have cooperated so leases have been agreed upon with the T. R. Sammons Co., local billboard owners and several new steel boards will no doubt be erected soon to cut off the view from waiting trains east of the Union depot. Negotiations are also under way to erect several billboards to be lighted at night to cut off the view to the northeast of the new C., D. & M. station. One of these boards will be used for local city booster slogans.

War on Chuckholes

"Our chuck-hole committee has been instrumental in having a few outstanding holes filled up in our city streets and alleys. If the city will dump two bushels of stone and tar in the big depression in front of the yellow taxi office, south side, and a half bushel on the Prospect st. curve south of Washington st, both of which we have driven over all year, we will consider this committee has earned a medal.

"The board has made several real estate appraisals this year, with quite an increase over last year. Business men and corporations are discovering it is the easiest and best way to get the true value of their property.

"During the year up to today, Friday at 4 p. m., City Clerk Keller reports 629 building permits with a total of estimated cost, (which, by the way, is usually 25 per cent to 50 per cent less than actual cost) of $1,371,000, but which in reality is over one and one-half million.

High Class Homes Built

"There were probably more brick and high grade homes built than in any previous year in our history. In the building permits for the year Oakland Heights carried off honors in building for the past year, there being 80 new houses either now completed or under construction in what is known as the Oakland Heights district.

"Last January we predicted an era of unusual growth and prosperity for our city and I believe the records of building and man-power employed, together with the city's program completed on streets, sewers, and sidewalks, has made 1928 an outstanding year. I have optimistic views concerning 1929 and believe that 1929 will be a still better year than 1928.

"We might state in conclusion that the 1928 building program was the largest in the last 10 years and remember that included 1919 and 1920, so that we feel our program has been fairly well carried out, and that our prophecy last January has come true, that Marion is growing better and looking better every year and I hope for my successor in office, a continuing of the same fine cooperation that has been given to me during the past year."

COOLIDGE ISOLATED ON YACHT IN SOUTH

President Leaves Newspaper Men Behind on Turkey Hunting Trip

cent travelers have become bogged.

Boatmen refused to make the trip at night because of the tortuous channel through the Florida passage and the shifting shoals. Absence of beacons and landing lights eliminated the airplane as a means of communication.

Late last night the Coffin foreman got back to the press base. He said his employer's yacht, with Mr. Coolidge aboard, had reached Floyd's neck "about 7 o'clock." The boat was scheduled to have reached there at 5.

The foreman was quite vague about the reasons for the delay, although he had said there was considerable difficulty in docking because of the pitch dark. He refused to be pinned down on anything else.

President Coolidge thus became the most completely isolated executive in modern history. For a little more than 12 hours at least he placed himself beyond touch with the outside world. The last possibility was eliminated when it was learned there was no wireless on the Coffin yacht.

The president's plans called for a turkey hunt beginning before dawn followed by a departure in the midst of the morning for St. Simons island where he will dedicate a sapling, to be known as "The Coolidge Oak," which reputedly grew from an acorn cast from the tree that local historians say furnished the timber for the keel and ribs of the frigate Constitution.

GUN WOUND FATAL TO 13-YEAR-OLD BOY

Suicide Theory Advanced In Death of Edward Humphreys, North of City

Circumstances surrounding the death of Edward Lee Humphreys, age 13, which occurred at his home seven miles north of Marion about 7 o'clock this morning, were being investigated today by Coroner R. D. Osborn, of Waldo, after the boy's body was found with a shot-gun wound in the stomach.

The suicide theory was advanced, although the boy's motive for his reported self-destruction has not been determined. The coroner was called to the home and the body later brought to the W. C. Boyd funeral home in this city.

The boy, born Nov. 20, 1915, in Kentucky, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Humphreys. He was a member of the Holiness mission at Morral.

Surviving him are the parents, and six brothers and sisters, Virgle, Ruby, Charles, Laura, Edna and Archie.

Thrill Business Being Overdone.

Hope of rescuing Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Hyde, of Hansen, Idaho, lost in the Grand canyon of the Colorado, has been abandoned and the various parties searching for them have been withdrawn. It is no longer deemed possible that the two young adventurers can be alive.

Over two months ago—seventy-three days to be exact—the young bride and groom started down the Colorado in a homemade scow for a thrill. When a couple of weeks passed and they had not been sighted or heard from, searching parties started out in the hope of locating them, and the hunt was carried on up to the end of last week. The search was made by boat, by pack-horse trains and by air. Army aviators engaged in the search reported seeing a scow stranded on a sandbar and footprints found in the river silt led to the belief that the two had abandoned their boat and attempted to climb the gorge walls, almost perpendicular and close to a mile high. No further trace of them could be found, however, either by searching parties in the canyon or by the parties searching the course of the river above, and the conclusion became inevitable that they paid with their lives for the thrill they sought.

The year which has yet but a few hours to run as been marked by quite a number of fatalities due to this same desire to experience a thrill, either the thrill of an exploit or the thrill of the publicity following its successful accomplishment, and we already have had announcements of quite a number of exploits to be attempted during the year on which we are about to enter. No less than half a dozen transatlantic flights are being planned, none of which, even thought it may prove successful, will prove of material benefit to the science of aviation. Most of them are of the thrill variety.

Were all pursuits of thrills successful, no serious complaint could be made, but the most of them end in failure, and searches for the missing thrill-seekers cause heavy expense, often great hardship, and occasionally entail loss of lives far more valuable to the world than the lives of those whose rescue is being sought.

How long are these thrill-seekers going to be permitted thus to impose on humanity? How much longer is the world going to permit itself to be disturbed by those who attempt extra-hazardous stunts and thrills for the notoriety and consequent personal profit they may get out of them?

The thrill business is being overdone.

The Waldorf-Astoria Soon To Go.

The Waldorf-Astoria, world-known hotel, famous as the scene of many notable American political, business and financial activities and the center of New York City's social life for two generations, is to be torn down. Together with Astor court and the Astor Court office building, it has been sold by the Waldorf-Astoria Realty corporation to the Bethlehem Engineering corporation, which will erect upon the site thus acquired a fifty-story office building with a frontage of 200 feet on Fifth avenue and frontages of 425 feet on Thirty-Third and Thirty-Fourth streets.

For a time, at least, New York will not be the same to the visitor to whom the city has become familiar. With the Waldorf-Astoria gone, he will find "something missing," which no office building will ever replace.

The Waldorf-Astoria is not the largest or the finest hotel in America, but it is easily the most notable of all the hotels on the American continent, made so by the notables and the notable gatherings it has housed.

The Waldorf-Astoria was originally two hotels. The first, the Waldorf, built on the site of the mansion of William Waldorf Astor, shortly before he went to England, where he later became Lord Astor, of Cliveden, was opened to the public in 1893. Four years later the Astoria replaced the home of John Jacob Astor, and the two hotels were made one under the hyphenated name.

"At the time of its opening the most luxurious hotel in America," says a writer speaking of the sale, "the Waldorf-Astoria soon became more than a mere hotel; it was an institution and its name a symbol for the ultra-fashionable in the social life of the metropolis.

"Visiting royalty stopped at the Waldorf-Astoria, among the first being the Infanta Eulalia and other Spanish nobles on their way to the World's fair in Chicago. The King and Queen of Belgium made it their headquarters during their visit to America after the World war, and the Prince of Wales also has been a guest.

"'Peacock Alley,' a name given to one of the main floor corridors where fashionable women were wont to promenade and display their finery, became known throughout the country.

"In addition to social leaders the hotel became the meeting place of nationally-known financiers and politicians so that the stories of many stupendous business deals and political coups, even baseball deals, are interwoven with its history.

"Despite its auspicious opening the hotel in its early days was not a complete financial success. At one time it housed only forty guests, while more than 900 employes stood about to minister to their needs, a circumstance which caused people to refer to it as 'Astor's folly.'

"Because of the large rooms the return per cubic foot has been found less than what is considered sufficient at the location."

And the passing of this famous hostelry will mark the passing from association with the public of Oscar Tschirky, the maitre d'hotel, known throughout the world as "Oscar of the Waldorf," perhaps the most widely known of all hotel employes. Oscar, who entered its service when the hotel was opened and has been in charge of its restaurants and dining-rooms ever since, will retire to a 1,000 acre farm on the Wallkill river at New Platz purchased by him over thirty years ago, which, he says, is just like Switzerland and thus just like home to him, where he will raise trees.

"People all over the United States and Europe and South America," Oscar mourns, "are going to have a sore spot in their hearts and perhaps a lump in their throats when they hear the Waldorf-Astoria has been sold. Naturally I feel bad about it. New York—well, New York just won't be the same without it. I feel sorry for Fifth avenue."

Hormones, which cure diabetes and aid brain control, cost $3,000,000 a pound. If your mental apparatus isn't working just right, don't take any chances. Buy a pound or two.

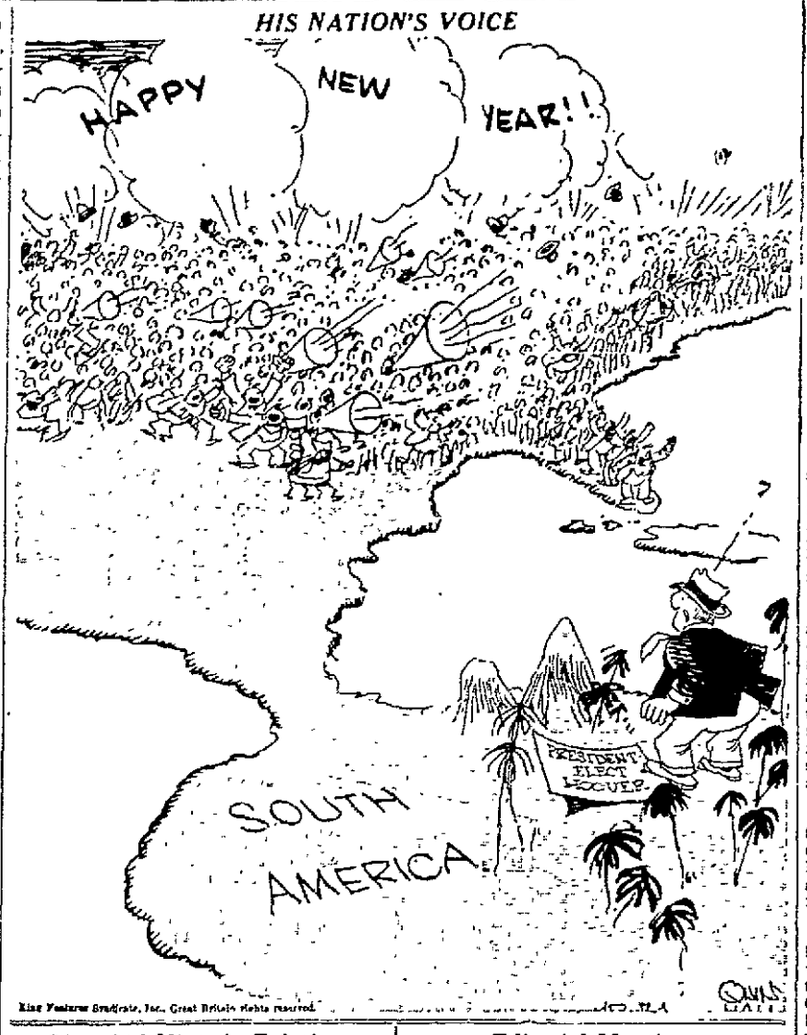

Upon the complaint of an American victimized by them on an Atlantic liner, France has expelled four American card sharks, which again arouses curiosity regarding the mentalities of those who will enter card games with strangers on steamships or trains.

The "crank" who invented the mine barrange during the war for which he asked $10,000,000 from the government, according to Governor-Elect Roosevelt, of New York, responds that he turned it over to the government without price and was so little a crank that the government put him in charge of its construction, paying him a royalty for four years, whereupon it bought the invention outright. It seems that Mr. Roosevelt has not entirely overcome his habit of talking loosely, which became so marked during the 1920 campaign.

An attorney for the defendant in the suit brought by Anne Nichols charging infringement on her famous play by the Universal Film corporation intimates that Miss Nichols stole the plot of "Abie's Irish Rose" from "Romeo and Juliet." If that doesn't cause the bones of the Bard of Avon to roll over, it's pretty near a cinch that they'll never hear Gabriel when he blows his horn.

Referring to the action of a federal judge in ordering government insurance money paid to the father of a veteran because the widow was unfaithful to the dead soldier's memory and had relations held improper by the court with a gangster now doing time, a Chicago paper says the judge followed the course he did when he learned of the widow's "romance with a notorious gangster." It's amazing what queer ideas some of our newspaper workers have regarding the definition of "romance."

HIS NATION'S VOICE

First Aid Hints in Fainting.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

There are many causes for loss of consciousness, besides normal sleep. We describe this state as "coma." Coma, then, is protracted unconsciousness due to abnormal conditions. It is a state from which the victim can not be aroused.

Fainting differs from coma. It is temporary, disappearing quickly. In this there is great paleness of the face and very weak pulse.

In coma, in that form due to something seriously wrong with the brain, for instance, there may be loud breathing or actual snoring. This is the form of coma we have in apoplexy. The face may be purple or flushed, quite different from the appearance in fainting.

A hard blow on the head may produce loss of consciousness. The damage is due to disturbance of the brain.

The sudden attacks some persons have and which are popularly called "fits," are responsible for loss of consciousness. This type is known as epilepsy.

In epilepsy there is frothing at the mouth. There may be quite a bit of foam on the lips. This may be colored from the bleeding due to biting the tongue.

Sunstroke is another cause for coma. Of course it is only in hot weather that this form is met.

Alcohol and opium, as well as some other drugs, may produce loss of consciousness. It may be difficult to determine the exact drug, unless the odor of the breath reveals it.

In Bright's disease, or other kidney trouble, there may be coma from what we call "uraemic poisoning." The poisons of the urine are absorbed by the blood. In turn the contaminated blood poisons the brain.

Some of the fevers, the contagious diseases, have coma as one of the symptoms. Malaria, too, has it.

Certain diseases, particularly diabetes, may have loss of consciousness as one of the complications. There is profound coma from which the patient can not be aroused.

I have seen absolute and continued coma in hysteria. The temperature and pulse are normal but the victim is dead to the world for the time being.

Just what should be done if a member of the family falls into deep coma?

Of course it is difficult for a layman to know what to do in case of sudden illness. The easiest and perhaps the best thing to do is to send for the family doctor immediately. But in the meantime, you will not feel right unless something is done at once.

Make sure about the heart. If it is beating fairly well you need have no worry. Unless the face is blanched as it is in fainting, the head and shoulders should be raised. Place several pillows under them.

Cover the patient with a blanket after loosening the collar and the dress, too, if the victim is a woman. The idea is to maintain body warmth. A hot-water bottle or bag at the feet will be helpful, but take great care not to burn the unconscious patient.

Don't attempt to force any fluid down the throat. It may run into the windpipe and do great harm.

Pretty soon the doctor will come and he will assume responsibility.

STIMULATING ENFORCEMENT.

A former federal prohibition administrator for New York, Chester P. Mills, wins the W. C. Durant $25,000 prize for "the best and most practicable plan for making the eighteenth amendment effective." Succinctly, what Major Mills proposes is that a closer check be kept on the manufacture of alcohol in order to prevent its diversion from legitimate to illegitimate channels; and that prohibition enforcement agencies be taken out of politics. These suggestions are not original with the winner of the Durant prize. The leakage of alcohol from the industrial reservoir and the political bedevilment of the agencies entrusted with the enforcement of the Volstead act have been recognized from the beginning as outstanding obstacles to making the prohibition amendment effective. The leakage can be stopped more easily than can political interference with enforcement, as long as the extra-legal agencies backing national prohibition continue to play politics.

A student in Palo Alto, whose plan won the $5,000 prize offered to high schools, appears to have come nearer the mark than has this enforcement official. Young Almack suggests that in addition to tightening up the law and its administration, an effort be made to increase respect for prohibition by teaching people "that is a good thing." There are millions of respectable men and women in this country who believe that prohibition has not advantaged the temperance movement. They will probably continue to believe so; but, at the same time, any increase in the ranks of prohibition must be looked for from education, as against force. Attempting to snatch the glass from the hands of the nation, while its thirst remains acute, appears to be fundamentally so futile that it is a question if this Palo Alto schoolboy was not entitled to the larger prize. There is no more novelty to his suggestions than to Major Mills'; but they do point in the right direction.

The prizes offered by Mr. Durant attracted 10,000 plans for making the eighteenth amendment effective. They came from every state in the union and from ten foreign countries. They were not all bone dry essays. Seven hundred and seventy-four suggested modifications of the amendment and 5,340 proposed modifications of the Volstead act; while 1,630 favored government manufacture and sale of liquor and 400 demanded light wines and beer. This is a rather significant fact, when it is remembered that $25,000 was balanced against a plan to vitalize the prohibition amendment as it stands in the constitution today.—Detroit Free Press.

FASCIST ARCHAEOLOGISTS.

Whatever else the Fascist regime may or may not have done during the six years of its power, certainly not even a finger can be wagged at it for archaeological neglect. No such significant work either in amount or in importance, has ever before been accomplished in Rome in the same length of time.

Considerable excavation was necessary to isolate the famous old tomb of the Scipios, on the Appian way, and during the work fifteen more sarcophagi were found in the tomb itself, and adjacent to it a sepulchral area in which, among the rest, an archaic tomb of nicely squared stone and a columbarium with beautifully painted walls were the most important. The Forum of Augustus has been laid completely bare, the ground plan of the temple to Mars Ultor—the Avenger—which Augustus built to direct attention to the violent death of Julius Caesar, has been made certain; the Theater of Marcellus, built in honor of Augustus's nephew, has been freed of the shabby houses and shops in and around it; the portico of Octavia, the sister of Augustus, has been isolated; the Forum of Domitian, or Nerva, has been cleared; the eastern exedra of the Forum of Trajan has been found to be paved with beautiful marble mosaic and surrounded with a great wall of richly decorated peperino stone, and work has begun on the Baths of Trajan, on the Circus Maximus, on the porticos built by Pompey the Great. Estruscan houses that antedate the Roman republic have been discovered in several places inside the limits of the modern city, and the underground chambers of the Palatine hill, as they become more numerous every year, enhance respect for the engineers and architects of the Roman emperors. Mussolini is a great driving force behind the increased activity in Rome along archaeological as well as other lines.—New York Herald Tribune.

Dinner Stories.

"Are you a politician or a statesman?"

"I'm a statesman," answered Senator Sorghum, "but I have hopes. In my opinion just now, a politician is a statesman with financial backing."

Husband, to scantily clad wife, ready for dinner party—"But surely, my dear, you are somewhat—er—haven't you forgotten something?"

Wife—"Why, of course! My earrings."

It was their first airplane ride and the young woman of the party felt quite nervous.

"You will bring us back safely, won't you?" she said to the pilot, with a rather faint smile, as they were about to start.

"Of course I will miss," he assured her, touching his leather helmet, "I've never left anybody up there yet."

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

Coming home by subway a guard addressed me by a boyhood nickname I have not heard in years nor would he tell me his name albeit he knew me well and puzzled all the day. At my labor, but such an amusing conversation next door I spent most of the time with my ear to the sill.

In the evening to the Embassy club to a dinner and among the guests were Rupert and Pat Hughes, Joseph and Margaret Moore, Rinaldo Luza, Katherine Howard, Ray and Lucy Virginia Long and Charles Hanson Towne and on the way home we say an auto overturn, but no one hurt. To bed.

There is always a free show on Broadway. Shortly after the curtain arose at a theater the other evening, Lindbergh walked down the darkened aisle with a lady and gentleman. As he reached his seat the star made her entrance. Whether it was or not he handled the situation gracefully by sitting down quickly and burying his face in a program.

Prayer—"Crown the Savior, angels crown Him; rich the trophies Jesus brings."

To Know Where You Are.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"I follow your articles every night with the hope of finding something about how to find the latitude. I understand clearly how to find the longitude, but when it comes to latitude I am stuck. I know that the sun is up to twenty-three degrees north in summer and as far south in winter, but suppose you are forty, fifty or sixty degrees north when the sun is perpendicular to the equator. How can you measure that? Moreover, how many miles are in a degree of longitude when the latitude is forty, fifty or sixty?—Joseph Cinque, New York."

The best way for you to measure your latitude approximately is by taking the height of the pole star above the horizon. That height equals the latitude of your place of observation. But the pole star revolves around the real pole at a distance of a little more than one degree, so that its height, or altitude, is a degree more than the latitude, if measured when the star is above the pole, and a degree less than the latitude when the star is below the pole. When the star is just east or west of the pole, in its twenty-four-hour circuit, the altitude of the star equals the latitude without addition or subtraction.

You can tell, roughly at any time what the position of the pole star is with respect to the pole, by observing the constellation of the Great Dipper. A line drawn from the middle star in the "handle" of the Great Dipper straight to the pole star, passes over the true pole about one degree before it reaches the pole star. This will show you whether the star is above or below or to one side or the other of the pole. For careful measurement of the latitude you must, of course, use instruments, and find out with the aid of the American Ephemeris—the astronomer's almanac—just what the situation of the pole star is at the moment of observation.

If you want to observe the sun for latitude you must first know its declination north or south of the equator. If it is just on the equator, as in your question, then its altitude at noon above your horizon, subtracted from ninety degrees, will give you your latitude.

But the best way to look at this is to start with the fact that the angular distance of the zenith—point overhead—from the equator, i. e., the declination of the zenith, is always equal to the latitude, just as is the height of the pole above the horizon. However, the equator is not a visible object in the sky, and to ascertain its distance from the zenith at any point on the earth, you make your observations on the sun, which is never more than 23½ degrees in declination either north or south of the equator. The Ephemeris gives you the sun's declination on any date.

Now, suppose that you should find the sun on a certain day at noon fifty degrees above the horizon—i. e., the true horizon, such as you see at sea. Then its zenith distance must be forty degrees, since the zenith is always ninety degrees from the horizon, and ninety—fifty equals forty. But on looking into the Ephemeris you find that the sun is on that day twenty degrees south of the equator. Then, since the sun's observed distance from the zenith is forty degrees, while at the same time it is twenty degrees below—south of—the equator, the latter can not be more than forty—twenty, i. e., degrees, from the zenith. But the distance between the zenith and the equator, as measured at any place on the earth, is always equal to the latitude of that place. Hence your latitude is found to be twenty degrees north.

Suppose, however, that the declination of the sun had been twenty degrees north instead of twenty degrees south. Then since its observed zenith distance was forty degrees, and the equator was twenty degrees below it, the zenith distance of the equator must have been forty plus twenty, equal to sixty degrees, and that would be your latitude. When the sun is exactly on the equator—at the equinoxes—its zenith distance shows the latitude directly, just as does the altitude of the pole at all times.

The length of a degree of longitude decreases from the equator to the poles, and is roughly proportional to the cosine of the latitude. At the equator it is about 69 1-6 miles; at forty degrees about fifty-three miles; at fifty degrees about 44½ miles, and at sixty degrees about thirty-five miles. Of course it vanishes at the pole.—Copyright, 1928, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

A California evangelist died recently and preached his own funeral sermon. The voice, of the preacher issued from a phonograph. He had made the record a few months before death. He said: "I have guarded my soul through life. I alone feel qualified to give my soul its departing message."

The preacher was right. He knew more about himself than anybody else. He was best qualified to preach his own funeral sermon. So are we all. The trouble is that so few of us will admit the truth, even about ourselves. Few of us would like to tell the truth about our lives and publish it on a phonograph record.

The council of the League of Nations has put the league's health organization at the service of the Greek nation. There has been an epidemic in Greece and that country appeals to the league for help. This bit of news may give some a new idea about the League of Nations. There is great peace-time work that may be done by such an organization. It is a war-time idea, but it should have peace-time purpose and peace activity. The day will surely come when war and militarism will be little discussed in international conferences. Such affairs will be out of date and greater matters will have taken their place.

The American people are supposed to be the freest spenders on the globe. But they also do a mammoth job of saving. It is estimated that in the days just before Christmas there were $29,000,000,000 in savings accounts in the banks of the land. There is such a thing as being a spender without being a spendthrift and there are spender nations that are not spendthrift nations. And already Christmas savings accounts have started for 1929.

• • •

Of course the outstanding reason for such success as the American democracy has as a political system lies in the quality of leadership that has been developed. And leaders who are worthy of the name and who have earned a following have, above everything else, a breadth of view. News despatches, for example, carry the information that former Governor Lowden addressed a letter to a convention of the American Farm Bureau federation in which he urged farmers to support Mr. Hoover's farm relief program. Mr. Lowden hoped to be nominated for the presidency. He failed in that ambition, but he has sufficient breadth of view to urge cooperation with the man who won the prize which he desired.

It is breadth of view which makes great men, and only great men can make democracy a successful system.

Well, Why Not?

MRS. STILLINGS ONE OF HISTORIC FAMILY

Aged Woman Buried at Milford Center After Funeral Rites in Marion

Mrs. Jane Melbourne Walke Stillings, whose funeral was held Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. A. Powers, 353 Park blvd. was one of the last of the pioneer Walke family, which is identified with important historical events in America dating back as far as the sixteenth century, according to records disclosed in the reading of her obituary at the funeral rites.

Members of the Walke family are recorded as founders of the city of Norfolk, Va. early in the sixteenth century.

It is said that the blood of four presidents of the United States flows in the veins of the Walkes, two definite connections being established with Thomas Jefferson and Franklin Pierce.

Pioneer Legislator.

Mrs. Stillings, a native of Union county, was the granddaughter of Apthony Walke, listed as a member of Ohio's first legislature and a member of the legislative committee which selected the landscape scene which appears on Ohio's official seal.

The view selected is said to have been at Logan hill, Chillicothe, then capital of the state. The land was a part of the old Walke estate, according to the account given in Mrs Stillings' obituary. The state seal is registered in the historical record of the Walkes in the state of Ohio and Virginia.

Mrs. Stillings, who was born 91 years ago at the Big Darby settlement in Union county, died last Wednesday at the home of a daughter in New York City. The body was brought to the Powers home here for funeral rites and was then removed to Milford Center, Union county, for interment.

In all, there are 12 generations of the Walke family in the United States.

Husband War Veteran

Mrs. Stillings' husband was George Stillings, a Civil war veteran who died in 1908. His father was one of the earliest settlers of Union county.

Other notables of the Walke family mentioned in the obituary are Admiral Henry Walke, of Carondelet fame, Cornelius Calvert Walke, who became a noted New York physician, and Henry Walke, designated as originator of the basic principle of the modern fountain pen.

Marion's "O. Henry" Plans to Keep Up Work As Writer After Leaving Prison

AFTER John R. Murphy, now serving time in the Ohio penitentiary for a burglary committed in Marion in 1923, is released from prison he expects to travel around the world to study people and get ideas for stories.

These plans he disclosed in an interview given out at the penitentiary last week following publication of accounts showing that he has become a writer of fiction during his imprisonment. His writings have appeared under the pen name "Burt Stokes."

In the same interview, Murphy explained how he became a writer and became successful to the point where one year's products have yielded him approximately $7,000. He has been designated as the Ohio penitentiary's "second O. Henry."

Selects War Theme

Practically all of his stories have been narratives of war and battlefields, although he has never been within thousands of miles of any scenes of army clashes.

"When I came here I thought over the folly of my past life," Murphy said. "I realized how hopeless it was.

"Finally I decided to satisfy my itch to write. I had never written anything before, but I always felt that I could turn out magazine stories.

"So I took a correspondence school course in English and studied every book I could get my hands on on the art of writing short stories. I studied about plot-making, character sketching and other elements of story writing.

"Warden Thomas was good enough to assign me to night duty in the library so I would have time to write.

Says Writing Is Hard

"I do not write easily. It is real labor for me, but I like it. Naturally when the checks for my stories started to come in, I was greatly encouraged."

Murphy's material and ideas for his war stories came entirely through reading and talking with his fellow prisoners.

So realistic was his work that the editor of War Stories, the magazine which has published most of the stories, thought he was a war veteran.

"Judging from his letters, the man was a soldier in every sense of the word and he must have gone through some of the worst campaigns of the A. E. F.," Eugene Clauer, the editor, wrote Warden Thomas.

In a communication to the parole board, Murphy admitted that his past life did not entitle him to any consideration and called himself "a plain unvarnished fool."

Parole Due Soon

He is expected to be paroled in February as the result of his sentence having been commuted recently by Governor Donahey.

Murphy is a high school graduate. After high school he attended a military academy, he said, but refused to reveal where. Later he joined the army, deserted, was arrested for forgery and imprisoned.

He is 30 years old. He is a forcible and incisive talker, and even in prison clothes is a handsome man. He was vague about his past life and indicated that Murphy might not be his real name. He was greatly concerned over the possibility of his family learning of his imprisonment in Ohio penitentiary.

His Prison Record

"My folks don't know I'm in here, and I don't want them to know," he said. "I'm afraid all this publicity will attract their attention."

Before entering the penitentiary, Murphy was in the U. S. army, but was arrested for desertion and forgery and sentenced to McNeil's Island, off San Francisco.

He escaped from there and was sentenced to Fort Leavenworth.

$6,500,000,000 IS SPENT BY ROADS

Claim Increased Operating Efficiency and Higher Grade of Service

BY W. S. COUSINS

Copyright, 1928, by International News Service

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—The American railroad systems have spent $6,500,000,000 since 1920 for new and improved equipment and other facilities for the transportation service, as the result of which operating efficiency has been increased and a higher grade of service rendered the shipping public.

This, in a nut-shell, is the outstanding claim of the railroads to the support and co-operation of the American business and industrial interests, according to R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railway association. Aishton told International News Service today that the roads are making less than five per cent on their property investment, and that it was only through rigid economy and increasing efficiency that they were able in 1928 to approximate that rate.

"The financial situation of the railroads of the country constitutes one of the most important problems facing the carriers if they are to continue to furnish adequate and dependable transportation," Aishton declared, "this is a matter of national importance, for the welfare of the shipper of this country, the general public and the railroads depends on the maintenance of adequate transportation."

HELD FOR MURDER

Pangs of Hunger Send Negro Into Hands of Law

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 31—Captured because his fear of the law had been overcome by the pangs of hunger and a desire for revenge, David Ware, giant negro, was lodged in jail here early today to await arraignment Wednesday on the charge of murdering State Trooper Peter Gladyn. Police said he confessed to the crime.

Needing money to buy food, Ware attempted to sell the youthful trooper's revolver to two negroes in Carteret, N. J., yesterday. He was trailed to a rooming house and captured by Sergt. J. J. Dowling, after eluding an intensive man-hunt carried on by a navy blimp, two navy planes and a posse of 150 troopers and citizens.

NEGRO IS EXECUTED IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

ROCKVIEW PENITENTIARY, BELLEFONTE, PA., Dec. 31—Wray Wormsley, 23-year-old Washington county negro, today was the fourteenth and last man to pay the death penalty for murder in Pennsylvania during 1928.

The negro walked into the electrocution room silently and with unfaltering step at exactly 7 a .m., and six minutes later was declared dead. Wormsley killed Israel Slotsky, Washington business man on Jan. 19, last, in a robbery attempt.

Why Fat Had to Go

FashionForbadeIt

A few years ago, Paris forbade fat. All her styles were created for the slender. Then there came a tide of disapproval for obesity, both in men and women. Youth and beauty, health and vigor demanded its reduction.

Then science came in. It found that a great cause of excess fat lay in a defective gland. By thousands of experiments on animals it found that excess fat could be banished by correcting this deficiency.

That is one great reason why excess fat has been disappearing fast. You see that in every circle. Slender figures are the rule. Mothers look like daughters. Not by starving, not by over-work, but by scientific measures.

The greatest factors in this fight on fat are embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for over 20 years—millions of boxes of them. Users have told others the results. Thus, year by year, the use has grown until it is now enormous.

Try this modern method. No abnormal exercise or diet is required. Correct the cause. Watch the fat go, day by day. Watch the new health and new vigor. A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Daphne

An Unusual Romance of Love and Sacrifice

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER 53

DAPHNE sat in her small, dark paneled office, that opened off of Mr. Greely's larger one, with Allan Winter's black box open on the flat topped desk before her.

"I'm going to do some special work for Mr. Greely," she told Barney, the office boy, "so don't let anyone disturb me, will you?"

"I won't," he promised, and he kept his word. Towards 4 o'clock when Ralph McKevitt drifted in, so immaculate, so beautiful, in his new blue tweeds, that even the stolid Miss Yardley couldn't keep her mind on her work, he was told that Miss Haines was busy.

"Well, I suppose she is," he grinned, "but tell her I want to see her a minute, will you?"

"I'm sorry, but she said she wasn't to be disturbed for anything today. She and Mr. Greely are doing some special work."

"Never mind then. Phone Greely I'm here."

"Mr. Greely gave orders that he was not to be called, either." The shadow of a smile flickered across the serious Barney's mouth. He was thinking of the old man asleep in his chair, with a newspaper over his head. But not for worlds would he have admitted what he knew. If the Boss wanted to make out he was busy when he was really asleep, was it anybody's business?

"Greely can't be called either?"

"No sir. I'm sorry, sir—"

Ralph's mouth shut with a click. "Very well then, you needn't mention that I was in!"

When the door closed behind him Mrs. Hobbs, the telephone operator and Miss Yardley, Mr. Sanderson's secretary, exchanged meaning glances.

"Did you get that, honey?"

"I don't miss much," Miss Yardley admitted.

"Can you beat that? Jealous of poor Mr. Greely, and him going on eighty—"

"Shh—"

They both looked at Barney.

Barney's large transparent ears turned pink. His bright little eyes, back of the horned rimmed glasses turned large with wonder. "Haw, haw!" he roared, "he thinks th' old man and Miss Haines are—"

"That'll do, Barney!" Miss Yardley said severely.

"Well, I should say so!" Mrs. Hobbs seconded. "The very idea. One thing I hate is a fresh office boy. You keep your vulgar ideas to yourself, young man, do you hear me?"

"But you said yourself—" Barney protested.

Mrs. Hobbs adjusted her headpiece and returned to the switchboard. "I didn't say anything. Now shut up, I got my work to do!"

* * *

In the private office Daphne went about her task listlessly. It was dull enough. The usual hodge-podge of "private papers." Receipted bills, cancelled checks, income tax returns, insurance policies, old letters, note books, penciled scraps, memos that only a Sherlock Holmes could make head or tail of. The miracle that old Mr. Greely had expected to come out of the black, tin box seemed unlikely to materialize.

Daphne's head ached. She went and stood at the window, looking out over the bay, silvery and flat in the afternoon sun. Far out a freighter belched black smoke. Close in, the ferry boats floated, fat yellow and white ducks on a silvery pond. "I wish I were going away on a ship," she thought. But where? There was no place to go. The only friends she had in the world were right here in the office, and in Mrs. Binckle's shabby house on Geary st. Ralph had shown no interest in her since the night she left to go to her dying father.

Not a sign to show that he cared, that he ever thought of what might have been. Just a pleasant, friendly indifference that cut more deeply than any sign of anger could. Not even a word to say that he was sorry old man Haines was no more. He sent a wreath of something or other from a florist on the day of the funeral. Adelina had said the flowers were elegant, but Daphne hadn't even looked at them, her heart was too heavy. And Adelina had acknowledged them, writing very carefully, on her new black bordered paper, with Crystal looking on complacently.

"Well—it's all over," she whispered to herself, "all over—" and went back to her desk and her work.

Old Mr. Greely shuffled out at 5 o'clock, refreshed and happy after his nap. "Don't stay too late," he warned her. "There's no hurry about that stuff, Daphne—any time will do, just so that you do it eventually—"

Doors banged in the outer offices. The girls going home. Then silence. The building was hushed.

Daphne, with one hand supporting her aching head, read on conscientiously. But the letters blurred, the words became meaningless. "I might as well quit," she thought. "I wouldn't know anything important if I saw it, in this state of mind."

But before she put the papers back in their big box she turned the key and looked into the smaller back box. Perhaps she should have begun there . . . . it was likely he would keep the more important things locked. . .

There wasn't much in the small box, just a few envelopes, a pile of yellowed newspapers, a little pile of photographs. She touched them gingerly . . . impossible to go poking through some one's private affairs like this . . . She shut the little box . . . But Mr. Greely had said that if she didn't do it someone else would have to, perhaps someone less gentle with his keepsakes . . .

She opened the box again, moved the papers about with nervous fingers. Out of a faded photograph a young woman looked at her with large, curiously tragic eyes. A young woman whose slender shoulders seemed too frail to support her great, plumed hat, whose feet were lost under a swirl of billowing skirt . . . the ill-fated Cora of whom Mrs. Colby had talked . . . Allan's mother . . .

Allan's father was there too. It was impossible not to recognize him from old Mr. Greely's description. A jocose gentleman, with carefully combed dark hair, and an exceedingly high collar. One hand was stuck inside his coat. He leered at Daphne . . . "Am I not a wonder?" he seemed to be saying . . . Daphne unhesitatingly buried him under a pile of papers. He made her vaguely uncomfortable, ashamed . . so like Allan, so unlike him . . .

It was a modern picture that came next, a glossy, black and white print. A blond, young giant in football clothes, his wide shoulders padded, his yellow hair tousled, a wide smile on his handsome, boyish face . . . Ralph.

It was the first real photograph that she had ever seen of him. The old, blurred newspaper prints didn't count . . . she studied it long, and hungrily. The tears gathered in her eyes, spilled, unheeded down her cheeks. She was oblivious to them, oblivious to everything but the small, cheap photograph that she held in her shaking hands. Long minutes passed. It grew dark in the little private office. After a long time she put the picture back with the others, and turned the key in the box.

Viola was waiting for her when she dragged herself up the sagging front steps, after a half-hearted attempt at a solitary dinner.

Viola's gray hair was all awry, her face flushed and shiny with perspiration. "I've been waiting for you, and waiting for you," she whispered. "I wish you'd go quick and see what's the matter with Flora McCardle. She's carrying on something awful in her room, she must be in some awful trouble—"

Half way up the steps Daphne turned. "Didn't you try to do anything for her?"

Viola's thin lips closed. A dull red suffused her already flushed face. "Certainly. I'm sure I always try to help everybody. I do my best. But I admit I don't understand Flora. Mama says if she don't stop swearing she's got to move, or everybody else will. This is a respectable house. We haven't ever had any trouble, and we—"

Daphne didn't wait to hear the rest. She was at Flora's locked door. "Flora! Let me in—Please! It's Daphne!"

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

YESTERDAY was Sunday and today was Monday and New Year's eve. Tomorrow doesn't come until next year. It was as cold yesterday morning as if the old year was trying to give us all it had all at once, and when I let Jubilee down I bet he was glad that some one had cut off the most of his tail when he was little, because the only way his tail could have been colder was to have been longer. I bet it was froze so stiff that if I had let him drop out of the window instead of letting him down by the rope in his teeth, and he had landed on his tail his tail would of stuck into the ground and kept him there straight up till warm weather came and thawed it out so it would bend over and let him put his feet on the ground.

After breakfast my ant scrubbed me so hard for Sunday school it felt like my face was smooth and I thought maybe she would have to mark some new features on it with a lead pencil; if I was colored she would have to do it with chalk; but when I looked in the looking glass after she got through all the old features were there.

When we were all on our way to Sunday school, Nibs hollered, "Oh, who sees what I see?" We all looked and there was a fella dressed like an old farmer with Arkansaw whiskers in an auto all covered with hayseed, and big banners on the front and back said, "See 'THE HAYSEED,' all this week at the Criterion." I gave another look, and it was our auto the man had tooken away to paint, and instead of going to Sunday school we all turned around and picked them up and put them down as fast as we could, for home, and when I began telling my father about it he was putting on his evercoat before I got done, and we all went looking for the man and the auto, but we didn't find him. After dinner we went sleying, and my father went to see the man that took the car to paint. I think he saw him; because when I went home to milk the dumbed bruiser my father had a black eye, but the way he acted I bet the other man had two black eyes.

Today was another sockdolager. My mother told me that the theater was going to pay the man $25.00 for the use of our hayseedy auto for a week, and my father got the 25 and is going to get the auto painted free, so he won't have the other man arrested.

I got a horn and a tin bucket to [illegible] up town hammering and blowing and yelling when all at once I got a kick in the pants and there was my father. I was made to go home. He had better kick my pants all he can while he can, for sometime I will be kicking pants.

THE HEART STORY OF A WOMAN'S AFFECTIONS

By ADELE GARRISON

Katie Confesses to Madge

KATIE was confessing only what I had strongly suspected when she admitted that she had told me a falsehood. Upon the day of her request for an early luncheon, she had not gone to the funeral invented when her suitcase fell open, displaying her fantastic mourning garb. But I let no hint of that suspicion appear in the interested face I turned toward her.

"I make oop my mind to trail Mary," she went on, "ven I hear her telephone dot Meester Jackson to take her Easthampton match embroidery silk. She no embroider tings—her needle roosting in tree-four piece already vunce."

She spoke only the truth. I knew that Dicky's young niece had not touched a piece of embroidery for months.

"Sumtings go tinkle inside me," Katie grew eloquent, "und I say, Katie, now your time find out sometings.' So I ask you haf looncheon early und I fix my disguise in suitcase all ready."

I had hard work to keep from laughing despite my suspense as I remembered the fantastic mourning "disguise" which had tumbled out of Katie's suitcase upon that memorable afternoon. But I had no time for mirth, inward or outward. My little maid's words were fairly tumbling out, so absorbed was she in her story.

"I no believe Mary going by Easthampton," she said, "any more dan I go by Quogue, as I tell you. But I tink pretty sure maybe I find her at Southampton, vere dot 'Janet Rawdon' lives. So I go dere straight from farm. I stop in woods on vay und put dot mourning dress on ofer my oder tings, und put on my hat und veil. Den I go valking around Southampton, vatching for dot Mary.

"Pretty soon I see dem drive oop und I get close as I dare. I see dey near post-office, so I go in dere, pretend to be making oudt money order blank. Den Mary she coom in, mit letters in her hand, und she drop dem in letter slot, den she stand still, und she look at me und she look all round post-office, und she look outside, und she see dot Meester Jackson standing by window, looking in und laughing at her. I think he laughing at me, I look so greer.

"Den dot Mary, she shrug her shoulders, so,"—Katie gave a realistic imitation of Mary's gesture—"und she go oudt of post-office, und she climb in dot Meester Jackson's car, und she say, "Let's go, George,' und dey drive avay und I coom home, for I kno she not coom back because dot Meester Jackson he looking in dat vindow.

"You know vot I tink dot day?" Katie invested her question with much dramatic intensity. "I tink Mary she expect see dot Janet Rawdon in post-office und snatch a vord mit her, ef dot Meester Jackson stay in car. But ven he look in vindow she no dare stay. I look around, try see voman look like she call herself Janet Rawdon, but I see nobody.

"I coom home, und I try tell you somethings, but you terrible high hat, und I feel bad und my goat he get untied, und I shut my mouth tight und I say nodings. I sorry now I act so by you, Missis Graham."

My little maid's tone was properly remorseful, but I did not believe very strongly in her contrition. She was enjoying herself too hugely for sorrow. But I gave her prompt absolution.

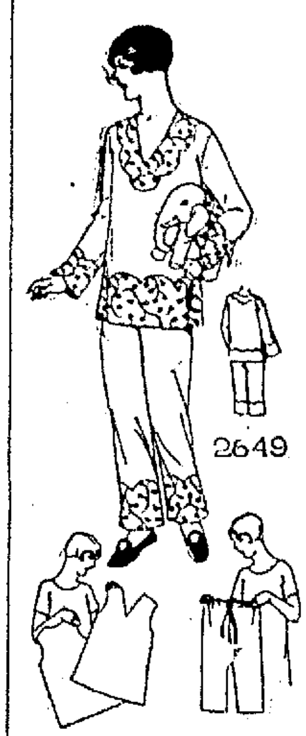

"That is all right, Katie," I said. "I haven't thought about it. Go on with your story. I am sure you have something more to tell me."

"You bet your boots, I got sometings more," she exulted. "Vot you tink ven I tell you I saw dot 'Janet Rawdon' today?"

The arms of a New York inventor's coat hanger are divided, the upper halves being controlled by a spring to hold a garment firmly and prevent it slipping.

10 LOCAL FIVES PLAY THIS WEEK

LIMA CENTRAL TO MEET HARDING ON STAR COURT FRIDAY

Eagles Schedule Two Games; Industrial Fives Are Booked

ALTHOUGH no games are scheduled in Marion tonight or on New Year's, the balance of the week will find local cage quintet facing busy schedule of games.

Tuesday night the Eagles will journey to Wapakoneta were they will play the fast American Legion five. Wapak has an exceptionally strong team and battles with Marion have always been the outstanding of its season.

Industrial league teams will pry the lid off the week's schedule with three contests. None of these games should change the league standings in any way. Osgood, in first place since its unexpected defeat of the Electric-Kappas last week, will take on a weak-sister in the first game meeting the Power-Hockings.

Two games that should develop into battles are scheduled in the league. The College-Malleables will tackle the Electric-Kappas while the Steam Shovel takes on the Bonhannan-Excavators. The opening game is carded for 7:30 o'clock.

At the Y. M. C. A., the Butler team will open its season playing the Mansfield Yellow Jackets at 8:15 o'clock. The game will be preceded by a preliminary. The Mansfield club boasts of the best colored stars of that city.

Thursday night the Eagles will be back in Star auditorium after playing at Wapak. Ohio university, the dark horse of the Buckeye Intercollegiate Athletic conference, will be seen as opponents. This will be the first college aggregation to play in Marion this year.

Harding high cagers will take on their first stiff scholastic opposition in Star auditorium at 8:15 Friday night playing Lima Central. Last year the Lima school defeated the locals at Lima.

The Y-Indus cagers will get into action again Friday night on the Y. M. C. A. floor playing the Caledonia Independents.

No contests are slated in the Sunday school loops. These teams will resume play next week after a layoff of two weeks.

SAY GOO'BYE TO THE MINORS

FIRPO WILL MEET ROBERTI ON FEB 1

Size, Developed by Easy Life, Against South American

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Louis Angel Firpo, who can always boast that he knocked Jack Dempsey out of the ring, is slated to make his fistic comeback Feb. 1 at Buenos Aires, South America, according to cabled advices to Promoter Humbert J. Fugazy. And his opponent will be none other than Roberto Roberti, who has established himself in this South American city. If Firpo can get by two gobs he expects to visit the United States once more.

The only hitch at present is Firpo's size. His recent life of ease increased his volume to a point where it is even doubtful if a ring strong enough to hold him can be built.

SHOOT PLANNED

A clay bird shoot will be held New Year's afternoon starting at 1:30. The shoot will take place at Allina on Hillman rd., which is located in the north end of the city. The shoot will be open to anybody desiring to enter and prizes will be awarded.

At least 100 ambitious recruits will drop in on training camps of the eight National League clubs in another couple of months. Above are three of the most promising. L. to r., Charles Gelbert, who, as a league-leading shortstop for the Rochester, N. Y., team, was purchased by the St. Louis Cardinals; Howard Decatur, Rochester pitcher, who will report for duty with the Phillies, and Herman Bell, also a moundsman, who will join the Cards.

KENNY NOT TO WAR AGAINST STONEHAM

Brooklyn Contractor Buys One-Fifth Interest in New York Giants

NEW YORK Dec. 31—William F. Kenny, wealthy Brooklyn contractor who has just acquired a one-fifth interest in the New York Giants, declared upon his arrival here early today from Albany, N. Y., that he will not "start a war" against Charles A Stoneham, president of the club, or upon any one else connected with the team. He said he did not intend to meddle with a smoothly working machine.

Kenny had just returned from Gov. Al Smith's birthday party at Albany. He said there was "nothing to" a report that the Democratic leader would become associated with the club. Kenney was one of the governor's chief backers in the recent presidential campaign.

YALE ATHLETE DIES IN HEROIC EFFORT

Saves Girl, Then Drowns in Attempt To Save Her Brother

CRANFORD, N. J., Dec. 31—Thousands of sports lovers throughout the east today mourned the heroic death of Norman S. Hall, famous Yale athlete who yesterday gave his life that another might live.

Hall, captain of the Yale track team, guard on the football eleven and one of the nation's outstanding athletes, was drowned in a lake here after rescuing a skater, Miss Vera Genz, 17, from the icy waters. Returning with true bulldog courage over the thin ice to save the girl's brother Leonard, who was his classmate at Yale, Hall fell through the ice. It was an hour before police could drag him out of the chilly water, and he died while police were attempting to revive him with pulmotors.

Genz, who was saved by a Boy Scout, was heartbroken today over the tragedy, as was his sister. Hall had been spending the holidays with them. He lived at Neptune, N J, and was 20 years old.

While a star on the Yale eleven for the past two seasons, Hall scored his greatest athletic triumphs in track. He made notable records in the 120-yard hurdles, the discus throw and the shot-put.

THIRD SHOW

Findlay Legion Schedules Gans and Thomas for Jan. 8.

FINDLAY, Dec. 31—The general impression in cauliflower circles is that Rudy Thomas, the Cuban lightweight of Chicago, will be a difficult proposition for California Joe Gans to master when they tangle here Jan. 8th in the American Legion's third boxing show of the season.

Thomas is rated as a capable boxer and a hard hitter. Those who have seen him perform say that he has plenty of steam behind his punches. He combines speed with skill to thresh his foemen.

California Joe is an elusive target. He's hard to hit. Gans skips about the ring phantom like and after poking an opponent from in front he's apt to dodge a counter attack and sock his adversary from behind while his victim is looking for him elsewhere.

With two speed merchants of the type of the Cuban and the negro in the roped arena together, ringsiders are certain to get a real entertainment.

AMERICA'S RULE OF HEAVY CHAMPIONS DRAWING TO CLOSE

No New Pugs Being Developed West of Atlantic Ocean

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK Dec. 31—America's dynasty of heavyweight champions, carrying right on through some 40-odd years from Sullivan to Tunney, is likely to be broken, if not permanently severed, before 1933 by the succession of a foreigner to the world's title, it was agreed today by some of the sterling minds of the profession. Among the forecasters or prophesteers which probably is more like it, were Joe Jacobs, who manages Jack Delaney whenever he can, and Jimmy Bronson, famed as the man who managed Tunney's manly during the two Dempsey fights.

To be frank, the writer shared the idea and the group, knowing nothing definite against it offhand, was forced to nod its agreement. This method comes within the precepts of lesson 6, figure 2, in the handbook entitled being a reporter and what of it. A free interpretation of its message follows. When your prospect has no story, tell him one.

Growing Worse

Anyhow, there was none who could deny me for the simple reason that everything points to a somewhat abrupt and not too distant ending of all this American supremacy we hear about and every boxing man, with the intelligence to come in out of the fluid, knows it. The thing is simple arithmetic. American heavyweights as a class admittedly are growing worse; foreign heavyweight, both individually and as a class, are growing rapidly better. It would seem to be only a question of time when, proceeding as they are in opposite directions, they must pass each other on the road.

Few realize as a matter of fact, how close America has been to losing the heavyweight title during the last 10 years. It has been with us so long that we have come to accept its permanency as a matter of course. Yet one more punch in 1923 and the title could have gone back with Firpo to the Argentine. A visit of the title to France or New Zealand became a possibility on two other occasions, making three times in all that a foreigner occupied the challenger's seat in the last six championships staged.

Jest of Profession

It was not thus in the era immediately preceding 1918. Then the foreign heavyweight was the jest of the profession—they stood him up, you knocked him down and no hard feelings about it, either. The breed has changed so gradually as to have the transition pass almost unnoted. Carpentier got as far as Dempsey, which was too far, and everybody said it was all a mistake. Then along came Firpo from nowhere, sight unseen and never unheard. Within a year, he was so close to the title that some of the eye-witnesses are twittering and gibbering about it yet. Last year, Heeney came over in the steerage because he didn't have anything else to do. He had only a fair reputation abroad but, less than 11 months later, he was in there with Tunney.

The champ abroad becomes the challenger here. I think this either is one for the album or it is the penmanship on the wall. They must be making them much better abroad or we are making them much worse here and, either way, I don't see how we can go right on indefinitely.

No New Developments

In fact, we aren't or it wouldn't be necessary to clamor so loudly about the possibility of Dempsey's return to the ring. I don't mean by this that we will need Dempsey to save the title. Loughran or Sternling or Sharkey is fully capable of doing this at the moment. But that is just the point. The three named are hardly new developments. In fact, new heavyweight developments here of even passing worth number exactly none, a fact which keeps Dempsey's name before the public even in retirement, if any.

The foreign heavyweight, who today is beginning to go places, is mostly of the younger school. The contenders we had three years ago are approximately the contenders we have won. It is in this way that they caught us in tennis and all but overhauled us in track and field at Amsterdam. If anyone can venture a good reason why this might not happen in heavyweight fighting, he is welcome to the rungless stepladder.

M'Larnin Heads Rankings of Junior Welterweights

BY JOHN J. ROMANO
Copyright by The Marion Star

JUNIOR WELTERWEIGHTS

1. Jimmy McLarnin; 2. Baby Joe Gans; 3. Freddie Mueller; 4. Young Harry Wills; 5. Hilario Martinez.

MUSHY CALLAHAN has retired as undefeated champion of the 140 pound class and the mantle falls on the shoulders of Jimmy McLarnin. At that there is a question whether or not the knockout administered by Ray Miller will have a depressing effect on the mental workings of the hard hitting Irishman. If so, then Baby Joe Gans has a mighty good chance of displacing Jimmy as the leader in the heavy lightweight class.

Freddie Mueller, a speedy, sharp hitting boy; Young Harry Wills and Hilario Martinez come next in order. Any one of them is apt to upset the ranking.

LIGHTWEIGHTS

1. Sammy Mandell; 2. Joe Glick; 3 Jimmy Mellill, 4. Billy Wallace; 5. Ray Miller.

NO one appreciated Sammy Mandell's real class until he was called upon to face the conqueror of the speedy Sid Terris, Jimmy McLarnin. Mandell boxed like a master and made his opponent look like a novice. Sammy has not shown any backwardness in his work.

Joe Glick has come to the fore with leaps and bounds. Chalking up successive victories over Lope Tenorio, Tommy Grogan and Baby Joe Gans stamps the Brooklyn boxer as a real threat in the 135 pound class.

Jimmy Mellill's work has been generally good. A fast boy with full knowledge of his craft, he ranks well up. Billy Wallace is just beginning to show the stuff which caused many experts to think he would lead the division last year. Bad hands have been Billy's nemesis. With good hands, Wallace is the deadliest puncher in the class.

Ray Miller must be ranked next, if only for his surprising knockout over Jimmy McLarnin. No one ever did that before and Miller will undoubtedly assert himself hereafter. A victory of that kind usually brings out the latent ability of a fighter.

JUNIOR LIGHTWEIGHTS

1. Tod Morgan. 2. Honeyboy Finnegan. 3. Tony Canzoneri. 4. Eddie Anderson. 5. Davey Abad.

TODD MORGAN retains his superior boxing skill, as evidenced in his work during the past year. It looked for a time as if Morgan would have to relinquish his reins due to several attacks of boils. Tod rid his system of the disorder and fought like a real champion.

Honeyboy Finnegan, long, lean and with plenty of courage, comes second. Finnegan is qualified to hold his own with the best in the lightweight class and for that reason should rank well up in his own division.

Tony Canzoneri is placed in the junior lightweight class. The former kingpin of the featherweight class does not hanker to make weight any more. Tony fights well enough to be mentioned in the first five 130 pound lads.

Eddie Anderson has been fighting as a bantam, feather and now junior lightweight. Eddie does some surprising things in the ring and can be depended upon to make it hot for any opponent he faces.

Davey Abad has come to the fore rapidly. A draw with Tony Canzoneri and decisions over Eddie Shea and Pete Nebo are sufficient to place him among the first five.

FEATHERWEIGHTS

1. Benny Bass. 2. Andre Routis. 3. Santiago Zorilla. 4. Joey Sanger. 5. Eddie Shea.

BENNY BASS is rated better than the champion of his class, Andre Routis. Bass lost a close decision to Canzoneri despite the fact he sustained a broken collar bone early in the fight, then went on to defeat Harry Bitman with a knockout. Later he did the same to Dominic Petrone in jig time. This and Benny's otherwise good record command consideration.

The contest in which Andre Routis won the decision and title from Tony Canzoneri was too close to warrant the opinion that Routis is the best 126 pound scrapper in the world. Bass has the better claim.

Santiago Zorilla, Joey Sangor and Eddie Shea rank next.

BANTAMWEIGHTS

1. Fidel La Barba. 2. Bushey Graham. 3. Kid Chocolate. 4. Al Brown 5 Kid Francis.

FIDEL LA BARBA returned to the roped square and showed the stuff which elevated him to the top of the flyweight heap. La Barba's lay off did not affect his ability the least bit. A decision over Graham attests this.

Bushey Graham can outstep and bob better than the rest.

Kid Chocolate, a new ring sensation from Cuba has all the earmarks of a real champion. Before he is rated better than third, however, Chocolate will have to beat a few ringwise battlers. He has the ability to do this.

Al Brown and Kid Francis are the class of the rest of the bors.

FLYWEIGHTS

1. Spider Pladner. 2. Izzy Schwartz. 3. Frankie Genaro. 4. Newsboy Brown. 5. Steve Rocco.

IT is safe to say that this ranking can be upset any time any of these boys are pitted against each other. There have been more reversals of form among the little fellows than there has been in any other class. They are so evenly matched that a "break" either way is enough to win or lose a contest.

Spider Pladner, the French boy, is rated the best on account of the whipping he administered to Izzy Schwartz, No. 2 on the list. Schwartz is recognized as the champion by the New York boxing commission.

Frankie Genaro has slipped just far enough to permit other boys to make a good showing against him. Frankie was a classy champion when at his best.

Newsboy Brown has experience in his favor, something Steve Rocco needs before the Canadian can hope to win convincingly over the best in the division.

(End Romano's Rankings).

CINCINNATI TO HAVE HARD TIME KEEPING B. A. A. CAGE TITLE

Wesleyan, Miami and Denison Favored as Championship Contenders

DELAWARE, Dec. 31 — Cincinnati, Buckeye Intercollegiate Athletic conference basketball champions for two straight years, will have a stiff fight to retain its laurels in the campaign which is scheduled to begin this week, according to pre-season indications.

The Bearcats, who last year finished one full game ahead of Ohio Wesleyan and Miami, have lost two stars in "Red" Bolton, center, and Ellis Flax, sharp shooting guard. Bolton was graduated last June, while Flax, a sophomore last year, dropped out of school last semester and is reported to be ineligible for competition this season.

A veteran combination still is available to Coach Frank Rice, however, for he has Popp. Early and Franz, all regulars last year, in addition to others who saw plenty of competition during the 1927-28 season.

Ohio Wesleyan, Miami and Denison are favored by many as the possible contenders for the title. The Bishops have eight lettermen available and they showed promise by defeating Ohio State, 36 to 20, several weeks ago. Only two Bishops were lost out of the ten lettermen last season.

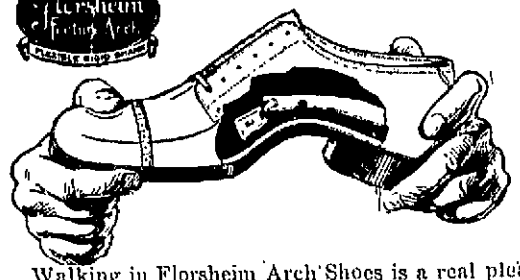

Miami, with seven lettermen available, expects to do more than its tie with Wesleyan for second place last year. Paul Taylor, all-Buckeye guard of two years ago, and all-Buckeye forward last year, will fill one of the forward positions.

Denison has six lettermen and should improve on its 1927-28 record, when it tied with Wittenberg for last place. Wittenberg must again build around "Little Joe" Keyser, keen-eyed forward, although Coach Ernie Godfrey has four other lettermen available.

Ohio is rated for the cellar position due to the Bobcats' loss of six of its eight lettermen. Coach "Butch" Grover has Jess Burkholder, forward, and John Brammer, center, as his only hopes. He must find two new guards and another forward.

That Cincinnati's prospects are none too bright is indicated by the Bearcats' 32 to 28 victory over Cedarville several weeks ago. Last year Cincinnati snowed Cedarville under a heavy score.

The Buckeye schedule will get under way Saturday night, Jan 5, when Cincinnati will play Wittenberg at Springfield. The schedule calls for each of the six teams to play each of the five twice before play ceases on March 2.

Greatest Market Year in History Closes, Stocks Move Higher

MOTOR AND COPPER SHARES TAKE JUMP

Red Metal Prices Continue Upward Trend, Nearing 17 Cent Mark

Chrysler Advances Two Points; Briggs Recovers 17 Points of Loss

BY W. S. COUSINS
J. N. S. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 31 — Today closed the greatest stock market year in history. While many of the active stocks started the day at a slightly lower level of prices, the motor and copper stocks were again swept along by a powerful buying wave, with price gains ranging from one to five points. Most of the steel stocks were also pointed upward, with Vanadium leading the so-called independents in a brisk upward move.

The copper producers hoisted the price of export copper to 16¾ cents a pound, another notch in the steady rise of prices for the red metal. Anaconda copper started upward, setting up new high at 117½, and most of the low-priced coppers, like Nevada, Magma and Inspiration, followed the lead.

Chrysler led the motors and sold above 133, up about two points. Studebaker, Briggs and Hupp got into higher territory. Wall Street was not alarmed over the prospect of heavy competition of the low-priced manufacturers of cars with Ford in 1929, as suggested by the putting on of 30,000 more men at the Ford plants and speeding up production to 8,500 cars a day. The rubber and tire stocks were strong. At 59, Briggs had recovered 17 points of the loss incurred in the early December crash. The big auto show starting Saturday is a boost for motor stocks.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF SATURDAY'S GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 31 — After the wheat market had dragged through most of the week with little support to offset persistent sales by Northwest interests, a sharp break in prices occurred Saturday.

Locals sold, carrying prices down below $1.20 for the May, where stoploss liquidation was uncovered. Heavy deliveries and a weakening of the December under long liquidation added impetus to the break. The market closed very weak, displaying little rallying power on the decline.

Corn prices moved up the fore part of the week on a lighter movement, a good cash demand and short covering in the December. Weakness in wheat Friday and Saturday and the heaviest deliveries of the month brought a reaction and prices finished the week about unchanged.

Oats and Rye Firm

Oats and rye were independently firm, maintaining part of the gains established early in the period, despite the weakness of the other grains. Strong statistical and cash positions of these grains were the reasons.

Wheat prices at the close Saturday showed net declines of 2½@2¾c, compared with the previous week. December was the weakest of the options. Corn was unchanged to ⅛c lower. Oats were ⅜c up to ⅝c off, while rye was ¼c up to ⅜c lower.

One of the principal reasons for lack of interest on the buying side of all grains was the quiet export trade. Business in these circles was decidedly flat, with the small demand laid to the usual foreign buyers' practice of light purchases at holiday time.

Strong Buying Support

The repeated refusal of the wheat market to break in the past few months has led to but one conclusion on the part of the trade—that there has been strong buying support. Up to the close of the past week it was conceded that this steady absorption had placed the market in a rather precarious position.

Receipts Are Light

The liquidation in December corn Saturday seemed in great part to be by speculative holders who have expected a rather tight situation in view of the large open interest and small stocks. Deliveries of 1,300,000 bu. on Saturday led to the liquidation and brought relief to shorts in the December who have been nervous over the slow reduction of the open interest.

Technically the position of the deferred futures was strengthened, according to pit observers. This was borne out by the market action.

Receipts the past week have been running comparatively light. Country offerings all week here were small, due in some measure to the fact that outside markets were overbidding local interests by 1@2c. It also seems definitely established that the farmer is bullish on corn and is holding for higher prices.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Prices on meats, vegetables, fruits and provisions in the city are ending up the old year without any radical changes.

From indications early today many well-spread feasts were being planned in Marion homes. Shoppers were at market places early and buying was extremely heavy.

Plenty of dressed turkeys and chickens were for sale, with the latter holding the edge in the purchases.

Practically every market in the city will be closed Tuesday to allow their employes to enjoy the holiday.

MYSTERY RECALLED

Mother of Dot Arnold Dies; Girl Disappeared in 1910

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—One of the country's, if not the world's most baffling mystery disappearance cases was recalled today when Mrs. Mary Martha Parks Arnold died at her home here on exclusive Park av. Mr. Arnold, wealthy importer, succumbed some time ago to the grief over the unsolved problem of his daughter, Dorothy's disappearance on Dec. 12, 1910.

The Dot Arnold case is known all over the world. On the December day the girl left her home on 79th st., just off Fifth av. She has never been heard of since. Clues which led all over the globe were vainly followed. Nearly half a million dollars was spent in search of her.

GET CONFESSION

But Police Question Youth's Admission He Slew Man

CLEVELAND, Dec. 31—Detectives, after working in 12-hour shifts and bringing in more than 200 suspected criminal characters in an effort to clear up a series of unsolved murders and robberies here, today had succeeded in eliciting a confession to one of the crimes.

A 16-year-old boy told police yesterday, after long questioning, that he was the murderer of Hyman Japkin, 55, who was shot to death last Wednesday night, presumably when he resisted a bandit in a barn near his junk shop.

Detectives are not certain however, that the youth's confession is valid. It conflicted in several details and later he retracted it entirely.
